

Where Time Stands Still

Picture the scene: a small Maldivian island stands, pure and pristine, untouched by the modern world. It's this vision that has inspired Dhuni Kolhu, an eco-oriented resort where luxury is seamlessly woven into the natural surroundings. Relax on white, sandy beaches. Discover the colourful marine life of thriving coral reefs. Kick off your shoes and get closer to nature. This is the Maldives as it should be – as nourishing to the environment as it is for the soul.

Nurturing Our Environment

Initiatives & Programmes

We are passionate about preserving and protecting the region's natural beauty. The entire Baa Atoll is a UNESCO Biosphere Reserve and we are playing a leading role in numerous environmental initiatives.

Environmental and Social Sustainability

The Maldives is a fragile ecosystem and we have adopted numerous initiatives to reduce our impact. We host an on-site drinkable water production and bottling plant – and only use glass bottles when serving. We recycle items wherever possible and use traditional techniques and materials in our buildings. And much of our fruit, vegetables, spices, herbs and orchids are grown in our own garden. We are also dedicated to preserving traditional skills and supporting the region's economy – from showcasing Maldivian handicrafts to sourcing our supplies from local businesses.

Protecting Marine Biodiversity

The seas around Dhuni Kolhu are teeming with life – and we are involved in numerous activities to make sure this continues. Projects include manta ray and sea turtle identification, sea turtle nest protection, a shark watch patrol and a coral nursery programme. We also operate a sustainable fishing policy – only serving fish caught by pole and line, always following sustainability best practice.

Ecological Education

We are eager to share our love of nature and, with our resident marine biologist, involve guests, associates and students in our initiatives. These include reef and island cleaning, tree planting, and growing plants and vegetables. To further raise awareness, we host workshops and events and circulate a newsletter of all our environmental activities and initiatives.
